“Tomorrow’s world will be shaped by the young people of today, but these young people will be shaped by those who influence them today.”

Founded in 2003, Halogen Foundation Singapore is a values-based, not-for-profit Institution of Public Character (IPC) dedicated to youth leadership and entrepreneurship development.

At Halogen, we desire to develop each individual through creating learning opportunities the moment they step through our doors. Many hands come together to help us make this happen, and we offer a spectrum of volunteering and internship opportunities throughout our Academy, Communications and Events that will be both enriching to the youth beneficiary as well as to your personal development.

We invite you to join us on Thursday, 16 August to hear from our CEO, Ms Ivy Tse, as she shares with you about the kind of youth development work that we do, why we do it, and how you can get involved.

Our dream is to impact as many youth as possible and raise a generation who cares enough to make a difference where they are, and through them, change the world for better. Our hope is that this is your dream too.

As a CEO of Halogen Foundation, Ivy provides direction and support for Halogen’s growth and work in the youth development sector. Overseeing all organisational matters ranging from training operations to human resource, Ivy specialises in partnership building and fundraising matters with corporations and community partners. She also supports start-ups and community initiatives as an advisor in business and organisational development matters.

Ivy was formerly with Procter & Gamble, piloting new product initiatives and handling supply chain management issues across the regional market. Having spent time in a multi-national corporation, her area of interest is in bringing the best practices of the private sector to the non-profit world. Ivy has been in the charity sector for the past 5 years and has served in multiple operational roles, managing youth and adult events as well as other organisation development assignments within Halogen.

Ivy is an Honours graduate from the National University of Singapore (NUS) and holds a Double Bachelor Degree in Mechanical Engineering and Business Administration. She was a Global Merit Scholar from NUS and also a recipient of the highly prestigious NUS Eminent Business Alumni Award in 2016. Being an advocate of youth empowerment, Ivy is a part of the INSPIRIT community, organised by the National Youth Council and Singapore National Employer Federation and is a mentor with Young NTUC Youth Career Network.
