“As an educator, I strongly believe in engaging in the scholarship of teaching and learning (SoTL) as a scientifically iterative approach to develop the effectiveness of teaching and learning.”

Eric CHAN is a Professor from the Department of Pharmacy, National University of Singapore. His belief is reflected in the consistent refinement of teaching (via pedagogical research, projects enabled by teaching enhancement grants and publication) and active engagement with the SoTL-Asia network.

Recently, he and his colleagues published a paper that investigates the perceived effectiveness of a communication course for Year 1 undergraduates in the Faculty of Science. If you are interested in the evaluation of a new course, you are invited to read his paper here.
