

Communicating in the University Culture

Communicating in the University Culture

Communicating in the University Culture

T. Ruanni F. Tupas • Catherine Cook • Norhayati Bte Mohd Ismail

T. Ruanni F. Tupas • Catherine Cook • Norhayati Bte Mohd Ismail

Entering the university is like entering a new culture. It means learning how that culture works. Recognising that success in the university depends partly on how well students engage in communication practices on campus, Communicating in the University Culture gives guidelines for some of those practices.

Each short, crisp chapter deals with an aspect of communication central to life on campus. Students are given clear, direct instructions on how to go about various tasks they will encounter in campus life such as Developing an Academic Essay or Giving a Presentation, as well as some guidelines for their interaction with those around them.

Written by a team of lecturers from the Centre for English Language Communication, the book is able to draw on many years of experience teaching NUS students and to focus on areas which teachers know cause students problems. While important, speaking and writing good English is not enough. This book will help students pay attention to some other important aspects of campus communication.

ISBN 978-981-08-3578-1

T. Ruanni F. Tupas • Catherine Cook • Norhayati Bte Mohd Ismail

Centre for English Language Communication
National University of Singapore