About Our Speakers:

Professor David Koh

Professor David Koh qualified in medicine in Singapore, and completed his postgraduate training in the United Kingdom.

He worked in Singapore for over 30 years where he served as Chair of the Department of Community, Occupational and Family Medicine and Director of the Centre for Environmental and Occupational Health Research, NUS, before joining the Universiti Brunei Darussalam (UBD) in 2012. He is currently a Distinguished Professor of Occupational Health and Medicine in UBD.

Dr Gan Wee Hoe

Dr Gan Wee Hoe is dually accredited in Occupational Medicine and Aviation Medicine. He is Head of the Department of Occupational and Environmental Medicine at the Singapore General Hospital and Senior Consultant at Changi General Hospital's Changi Aviation Medicine Centre. He is also appointed as SGH's Chief Medical Informatics Officer (CMIO) and an Adjunct Assistant Professor with NUS Saw Swee Hock School of Public Health.

Previously, Dr Gan was with the Singapore Armed Forces for more than 17 years, with his last appointment being Chief Air Force Medical Officer and concurrently Assistant Chief of Medical Corps.

Dr Andrew Tay

Dr Andrew Epaphroditus Tay is currently the Head and Director for Health & Wellbeing under the Office of the President in NUS. In his current role, he leads and drives the University's health and wellbeing strategies to enhance the resilience of the employees.

As a graduate of the NUS Yong Loo Lin School of Medicine, Andrew's career in medicine took an interesting turn when he took up various roles in prominent global companies in the private sector such as Facebook as Asia Pacific Regional Benefits Consultant and GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) as Director for Health and Wellbeing, before returning to his alma mater to serve in his current role.
